The scheme consists of a four-storey office building with a raised office level on the ground floor, and commercial, retail, and residential spaces, including two new buildings. The project is the first phase of Urban Splash's plans to regenerate the West Midlands' Wolverhampton area, with new developments planned for the area. The firm is working with architects for the project, including Aspinall and Partners, to design the new spaces.

The scheme has been approved for a mixed-use scheme on the site of the Walpole Centre, which will include a new office block and a new leisure centre. The project is expected to create up to 500 jobs. The development will include a new leisure centre, offices, and retail spaces, with plans to regenerate the area. The scheme is part of a wider regeneration plan for the area.
