will alsop dies aged 70

A significant contribution to 21st-century architecture, British architect Will Alsop, who has died at the age of 70 after a brief illness.

Alsop was a leading figure on the global architectural stage for over four decades. Throughout his career, he designed some of the most iconic buildings and public spaces in Europe, North America, and Asia.

His work was characterized by a unique blend of structure and playfulness, creating buildings that are as much a part of the surrounding landscape as they are monumental statements of architectural innovation.

Alsop's influence can be seen in the work of many younger architects, as well as in the public spaces and buildings he created throughout his career. His legacy will continue to inspire and influence architecture for years to come.

We extend our condolences to the Alsop family and to the wider architectural community. Will Alsop will be missed by all who knew him.
