curated by architects aljoša dekleva and tina gregorič (http://dekleva-gregoric.com/), the slovenian pavilion at the venice architecture biennale (https://www.designboom.com/tag/venice-architecture-biennale-2016/) features a latticed library that examines the role of the 'home' in the year 2016. presented by the museum of architecture and design (MAO) (http://www.mao.si/), 'home at arsenale' responds to the biennale’s ‘reporting from the front’ theme by addressing domestic topics as critical, social, and environmental issues.

the installation inhabits its arsenale location with a spatial structure containing a collection of domestic books and objects. the full-scale scheme, composed of wooden bookshelves, performs as both an elevated library and an abstract dwelling that encourages visitors to inhabit its latticed structure. the library challenges conventional private/public divides with a temporary public environment.

architects, artists, critics and curators from various backgrounds are participating with their selection of books addressing the prescribed notions of ‘home’ and ‘dwelling’. participants — including tatiana bilbao, pezo von ellenrighshausen, and konstantin grcic — are invited to become temporary residents of the installation for one hour to one day, hosting live events that question what defines a contemporary residence.
'Since the dawn of civilization, structures for dwelling have constructed the predominant part of our built environment, and have served to fulfill our most basic needs,' say curators Aljoša Dekleva and Tina Gregorič. 'Yet, they should aim beyond securing mere survival to provide the conditions necessary for a meaningful life.' After the biennale, the installation — and its 300 books — will relocate to the museum of architecture and design in Ljubljana, to be continually available for public use.
